CALIFORNIA INDIANS

In 1848, right after the U.S.
bought California from the Mexican government, gold was discovered here.
The land which was previously inhabited by Indians was flooded with white people. Then Congress, on March 3, 1853, passed a law taking the whole state of California from the Native Americans, without their consent and without any payment for their lands.

At that point, the unofficial war
against the California Indians began.
Bands of white men, supposedly vigilante groups, but in reality financed by the government, organized raids on Indian settlements killing everyone they could find. Sometimes they kidnapped the Indian children and sold them into slavery. (From 1852 to 1867 four thousand Indian children were stolen.)

Many of the Indians died of white diseases - small pox, cholera, bronchitis, typhoid and syphilis - to name a few.
Syphilis was the greatest killer - most of the women in a village would be raped, the disease would go untreated and infant mortality and infertility would follow.

In 1852 there were at least 110,000
Indians in California, by 1880 there were around 20,000.

Some went to Klamath Reserve and some to Round Valley and Eureka. The people who were moved to Eureka were put on a ship
and promised that they would go to a land
of "no killing and no white men with guns."
Instead they were taken to the middle of the ocean and thrown overboard.

Many Pitt River Indians were taken to Oklahoma Indian Territory, 1,000 miles away. In 1906 when they were released from confinement, they began the long march back to their homeland. Round Valley Pitts and Klamath Pitts returned to their homeland also.

The people of Pitt River Nation have said: "From this day forward, we will not look back. We have a world to conquer that we cannot leave for our children to do. We will reconstruct our Nation....
And this is how we will dwell for all seasons."

EDITORIAL

Applaud, defined by Mr. Webster as to praise; express approval or approbation
by clapping of the hands or acclamation.
Appreciative - defined by the same Mr.
Webster as exhibiting appreciation.

Strange how apathetic many people have become in this act of showing approval.
Having observed many show stopping performances by the late, great Louie Armstrong, Sammy Davis, Kay Starr, Etc., as well as the same type performances by virtually unknown small lounge artists, it is hard to believe that people in the last few years have become so unfeeling.

How disheartening it must be for a performer to give his all to a rickshattering of applause if any at all.

Even in the local nightspots, there is occasionally a very talented artist who gives a truly fine performance, but with no recognition to speak of.

So it is with many things, people often make kind, appreciative comments but how often do they say them to the deserving party?

One works to his very wits end, and exhausts his physical being for a school, church, community or other organizational function, and what does he get? If he is very fortunate he will get a simple thank you. If he is one of the unfortunate less diplomatic ones he will undoubtedly have offended some personal egos and will receive a great deal of good old American back stabbing.

How many of us ever take a moment to say thank you to our very good friends, not for a specific reason or deed, but just to show appreciation and gratitude for a fine and true friendship?

Are all things to be taken for granted, to simply acknowledge and accredit in silence? Does it make a person less if he speaks his mind, if he loves and appreciates openly? One, at least this one, would think the opposite to be true.

It would also stand to reason that if there were more thank you, more love, more respect, more real appreciation and gratitude flowing forth honestly, there would be less time for suspicions, gossip, hate and violence.

If one is so unfeeling that he cannot appreciate his brother's skills, talents, kindness - then how can he even hope to appreciate his own attributes?

Or is it that we are so pre-occupied with our own small problems, our own personal vendettas, and our numerous hangups that we have become numbed to the presence of those around us? That is hard to believe, for if this were true, we would not have the urge to cut down those we feel are inferior, those we do not understand, or those we fear may be superior in one area or another.

Respect for the dead has been uttered millions of times across the face of our planet, would it not be a more appropriate and better timed phrase if it were respect for the living?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

It's a cold, wet, miserable day. The elements are beating against the house as if to tear it down. A fine day to toast your shins and reminisce.

But then on the radio blares out the news. Laird-Nixon and company have the situation well in hand. We are sending 15 more B 52's in. We are going to kill, kill, kill every North Vietnamese before they can get over into Cambodia. "We will bomb what ever and where ever necessary", says Colonel Stoopnagel, USA, from somewhere in South-East Asia. "Necessary" to what objective, Mr. Stoopnagel? To establish a beach head in Vietnam on which 75,000 to 150,000 US boys in uniform will "serve time" from now on as in Korea of forty-nine and one other military bases in foreign countries?

It seems to me that a handful of men, military and civilian, who have long since dehumanized themselves via the computer route, are rapidly brutalizing this nation and all other nations with which they come in contact. We the partisan people cannot make ourselves heard, cannot influence our legislators, the president, much less the military. Time is running out for us all. Any international confrontation could be fatal. One nuclear war head and there won't be anymore! These men act like they are not aware of the fact that their so called enemy has the same kill power as they possess and the ability to deliver. Their avowed objective is so much hogwash. They say we are out to "contain Communism" in S.E. Asia. How? By destroying the land and the people of a small nation of some 15,000,000 people, when the two great Socialist nations aggregate some 850,000,000 people? The most stupid of all the stupid lies!

This handful of men claim to be products of a Christian nation, a Christian people! To the Christian readers of this letter let me emphasize, NOW is the time to act. I am not, of course, referring to "Christians" whose letters and prayers call upon their god* to bring victory to America and to further bless America. These people are obviously, bigoted enough to believe they are His chosen people and that the Vietnamese people are something less than human beings. But, surely, their poor minds cannot tell them that their god would make a free in the US good and the same tree in Vietnam bad?? We ARE deliberately destroying Vietnam and all growing things therein. I appeal to the sincere rank and file Christians: tell your ministry, your church, today, in one voice that our bloody misleaders must withdraw ALL our deadly forces from S.E. Asia today.

And to you infidels and atheists, who are convinced this society is responsible for man's inhumanity to man and that man must eradicate that fear and hate and greed or be destroyed by it, to all of us, TODAY is the time to break that silence and speak out loud and clear "Get out, and stop this insane genocide in S. E. A sia NOW."

Most sincerely,
Bert Hollopeter

Dear Editor,

We enjoy your paper enormously, and feel with a little support from your readers it could grow into a very worthwhile project.

Last week you printed an editorial done by a Faye Winfield, it completely lost us. It was out of content, disconnected and although there was a point, we felt it was badly written and definitely a detriment to your paper.

We feel in all sincerity that your paper could do without this type of guest writer even on a now and then basis.

You have stated that you will print anyone's opinion or point of view, which is a good policy; however, beware of letting those with a superficial intellect attempt to control your paper. If they feel they must air their narrow view, let them do it in the form of a letter, but why devote the space and draw attention to this nonsense by editorializing it?

Sincerely,
Mrs. J. K. Hill
Chico, California

Ed Note.: We will not answer for Mrs. Winfield, if she desires she will make a rebuttal statement in another issue. But we will state that we do not feel that anyone is attempting to control this paper, the CYHI was started for the people, not for the editor. We are grateful to anyone who takes the time and effort required to put together a piece of material for publication. We would say in all fairness that a person should not make a judgement on anyone's intellect without knowing that person. Mrs. Winfield's mind is in no way superficial, and we will be more than happy to print any of her material, as we will from any other one of our readers.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT BY WALLACE STEGNER

Something will have gone out of us as a people if we ever let the remaining wilderness be destroyed; if we permit the last virgin forests to be turned into comic books and plastic cigarette cases; if we drive the few remaining members of the wild species into zoos or to extinction; if we pollute the last clean air and dirty the last clean streams and push our paved roads through the last of the silence, so that never again will Americans be free in their own country from the noise, the exhausts, the stinks of human and automotive waste, and so that never again can we have the chance to see ourselves single, separate, vertical and individual in the world, part of the environment of trees and rocks and soil, brother to the other animals, part of the natural world and competent to belong in it.

NICE THOUGHT FROM STRANGE JOURNEY BY LOUISE LONE DOG

I said to myself, there is coming a beautiful time with many changes. There are many people hunting truth. Kindred souls meet on lighted highway and that is why they sometimes feel natural with each other the first time they meet.

Friends in the spirit are meeting with each other from all parts of the world more so than ever now, since the Dawn of a New Day is peeping over the hills.

How can anyone who listens with an open heart not hear the song of many souls rejoicing - many are learning to listen.
